FARMERS DIVIDED ON ENFORCEMENT OF NATIONAL POOL

COMPULSORY PROVISO OF PROPOSED MARKETING
PLAN MEETS OP-POSITION:

VOTE DELAYED

Morning Taken Up With Arguments on Allowing Option.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago.—Both sides of the question whether farmers entering into the proposed national compulsory marketing system should be compelled to pool a percentage of their grain were hopeful of victory when Thursday's first session adjourned. Efforts to set an early hour for voting were defeated.

While the committee of 17 which drew up the proposed system and called the conference, stood by its guns for pooling at option of the farmers, delegates from various sections told the convention compulsory pooling was the only thing that would make the system a success.

Bailey Attacks Option.

The attack on optional pooling was opened by E. P. Bailey, chairman of the Kansas organization committee of the Wheat Growers association of America, which stands for 100 per cent pooling but is willing to compromise on 33 1/3 per cent. This is the issue before the conference, advocates of compulsory pooling urging that each farmer who sells through the national marketing organization be required to pool a percentage of his wheat.

Mr. Bailey characterized pooling as the "missing link" in farmers marketing.

Another Kansas Takes Issue.

R. C. Gresham, another Kansas, also took issue with Mr. Bailey. He felt the Kansas Farmers' union, of which he was county president, would not sign a contract containing a compulsory clause.

Support was then given the compulsory sentiment, which centers in the southwest, the northwest and in the activities of the National Wheat Growers' association with Wichita headquarters.

Leonard for Compulsion.

Howard Leonard, president of the Illinois Agricultural association, said he was convinced that unless pooling was required of each farmer, it would not be possible to carry out the pooling principle. Prof. M. C. Filley, of the University of Nebraska, replied that the pooling was good, farmers would take advantage of the optional privilege offered.

The committee of 17 made its first answer through Wm. Hinch, member from Columbia, Mo.

"Compulsory pooling would mean absolute defeat of this proposition before it got started," he said.

"More pooling doesn't necessarily control prices when other factors are more powerful. We haven't any right to say that thousands of farmers shall blindfold themselves to sign up for so much of their crop before this marketing machine has had a chance to prove itself."

DISPUTE ON WAGES HOLDS UP CITY JOB

Water Plant Project at Standstill Result of Failure of Masons to Start Work.

Work on the new addition to the city water plant, South River street, is practically at a standstill as a result of disagreement between masons and contractors over wage scales, it was learned Thursday. Although wages of other trades have been cut, it is said the masons refuse to accept the offer of $1.25 an hour and are holding out for $1.25 an hour.

Her friends were ignorant of the tearing taking place when she began dancing, but before the last strains died away they saw her fall in a crumpled heap. Death sealed her lips before she could explain her motive.

Good Land Values.

Janesville has a diversified line of manufacturing. That assures soundness in the city's industrial program. In Detroit the motor industries are putting men back to work. As a direct consequence the merchants are selling goods. The farmer is not going to leave his acreage, and he will soon become an active factor in the buying market.

To produce from his acres, he is going to need motor power and he is going to buy tractors. We ought to know that the General Motors is big enough to go through with anything they undertake, and the Samson is the tractor and implement division of the corporation.

Not Open With a Bang.

"One cannot expect the revival to open with a 'bang,' but the values were never better. A man with money should invest in real estate now for the prices will never be lower. We have watched these slums through four different periods and the real estate man need not be worried a bit nor the property owner. The values are in the land.

We are going ahead and improving the land so as not to be caught napping. A time to come when the normal revaluation of business, so far as homes are concerned, is right now. Money is easier and things affecting the land market are looking for better than two months ago. You must consider the American spirit. That spirit is not going to stay a slump very long. The true American is not content to stand still. Many Changes Coming.

This city must go on building homes, for you must consider that fully. In 25 per cent of the property in the city lights are held for speculative purposes and will not be used for building sites. The rent situation is critical right now with production conditions just picking up.

L. G. Foster, of the market division, will hold a series of meetings in Wisconsin in hopes of having 50 per cent of the growers sign and start the machinery of the state pool this season.

Half Must Be In.

The pool is not to be attempted unless one-half of the entire Wisconsin crop can be secured under contract.

"The state will not go into the pool unless they know they can obtain at least 25,000 acres of the Wisconsin crop," said C. E. Culver, secretary of the Rock county association. "We want the growers to help the proposition, for it is the largest thing that was ever put before the tobacco growers. The organization would be even more effective than the association and state marketing system of the cheese-makers—which was a success from the start to the finish."

COURT ENJOINS SALE OR TRANSFER OF BUILDING BONDS

SAFEGUARD BLACKHAWK BONDHOLDERS FROM ILLEGAL SALES.

INVOLVE ECKSTEIN

Half Score Milwaukee Atorneys in Court Holders of Disputed Bonds.

Through the granting of a permanent injunction, Judge George Grimm, on Thursday, enjoined to prohibit the sale or transfer of the bonds for the Blackhawk apartments. The temporary injunction was made permanent during a hearing before the court Thursday morning, at which 19 Milwaukee attorneys appeared representing Milwaukee bondholders whose possession of the bonds is in dispute.

The bond of James H. Cullen, as one of the defendants in the case, was increased from $500 to $2,000 since many of the bonds in dispute have been turned in.

Hearing in the case will be at an early date, it was stated by Judge Grimm.

Eckstein Involved.

The case dates back to the turning over of the bonds to the bonds issued for the building of the apartment of Eman Eckstein, Milwaukee bond broker, for the purpose of being certified. It is alleged that Eckstein, now serving a term in the Milwaukee house of correction, kept the bonds and converted them to his own use in a fraudulent manner.

The matter is being taken to court to determine the valid bondholders from those who hold the bonds illegally.

Figures filed in the case today show that there are about $18,000 worth of the bonds which have not been certified.

Larkin-Menhall Slender Suit.

The trial of Frank Larkin, Johnson farmer, against James Menhall, Edgerton, for alleged slanders will start Friday in the circuit court. The jury has been drawn for this case and the testimony is to be taken during the morning session.

The trial is based on alleged statements when Menhall hired bloodhounds from Mauston to trail people who took five wild geese decoys from a Johnson farm. The complaint charges that the Edgerton manufacturer charged the plaintiff, Larkin, with the possession of the geese.

Indictments amount to $5,000 are pending.

Six More Cases.

Remaining court cases on the Rock county circuit court calendar are to be called April 11, at 10 o'clock in the morning, according to a notice sent out by Judge Grimm.

There are approximately 20 cases remaining for trial, the court.

"If our practice of settling continues, we should be able to materially help you by this number," said the judge. The remaining calendar will be called for the purpose of settling all cases for a day certain. Delinquent cases are to be heard in the afternoon of the 11th.

WOMAN DEFEATED IN SCHOOL FIGHT IN GREEN COUNTY

Monroe.—John N. Burns, for 8 years head of the Green county schools, was re-elected Tuesday in the face of stiff opposition by a plurality of 8 votes over his opponent, Miss Laura Riesenger. This is according to complete official returns. On account of the close returns a recount is deemed probable.

The attack of Judge Becker on W. E. Trunkenbord, director for 16 years of the county board and a member for 22 years, proved a failure as he was re-elected by the margin of 29 votes. Trunkenbord was opposed by those who thought the county should have offered no resistance to the claims of former Judge J. M. Becker for $3,335 in judgments of the official county judge after he was ousted by the governor because of conviction under the espionage act which decision was later reversed.

Madison Banker Takes New Position in Monroe

Monroe.—W. W. Gordon, formerly of the Wisconsin Bank, Madison, became assistant cashier of the Commercial and Savings Bank of this city. He was born in Darlington and was raised here. He was for five years connected with the First Wisconsin National bank, Milwaukee, and served overseas with the 22nd division, playing in the 128th Infantry band.

BRODER WILL IS DECLARED LEGAL

Supreme Court Affirms Decisions of Local Judges in $125,000 Case.

Two years of litigation in the Alice Broder will case ended this week with a decision by the Wisconsin supreme court affirming the $125,000 which bequeathed more than $25,000 to church, charitable and public institutions in Beloit, Milwaukee, and other cities.

Probating of the will was fought for nearly two years by the heirs on the grounds that Miss Broder, a Beloit woman, was of unsound mind when she executed the testament. The heirs objecting were children of Mrs. Margaret Giblin, sister of Miss Broder.

Judge Charles L. Pfleider held the will legal, and on the heirs' appeal to circuit court, Judge Grimm dismissed the case.

B. & L. ASSN STILL GROWING STEADILY

Secretary Optimistic on Increased Business in Past Two Months.

Increased activity with the arrival of spring is reported by the Janesville Building and Loan association, through Secretary J. P. Hammarskjold, who says the total of capital stock now subscribed for totals more than $40,000. There are still a number waiting to get loans pending the sale of more stock.

The association has now $5,000 loaned out for the building of houses with many applications for more. With industrial conditions apparently coming out of the six months' slump and the general cut in prices of building materials and labor, prospects appear brighter for a good year in building projects in Janesville.

Since the annual meeting two months ago, F. L. Clemons, president, and other officers of the corporation have disposed of $30,500 in installment stock and $5,700 in paid-up stock. Mr. Hammarskjold stated.

HARDING WILL NOT BE STAMPEDED

Insists on Thorough Study Before Turning Back on Versailles Treaty.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington.—President Harding at his semi-weekly meeting with the Washington correspondents made it clear that he doesn't intend to be stampeded into taking a decision so quickly on one of the most important policy and that he means to proceed slowly and cautiously in formulating America's program.

Many cabinet discussions and conferences have failed to develop a practical way to consider the Versailles treaty without submitting it again to the United States senate—action that might be taken as an endorsement of the covenant of the League of Nations which is a part of the treaty itself. Suggestions that the treaty might be rewritten with the league clauses modified or that the enforcement provisions of the treaty might be separated from those articles which have to do with international co-operation have seemed to lead nowhere. On every side the problem of condemning the treaty has seemed to receive no solution, while the new administration feels committed to reject.

TURNS IT BACK on Versailles. Meanwhile the movement to rush the Knox resolution has been to some extent stymied by the desire of Mr. Harding to maintain control over the phraseology of the resolution as well as the date of its passage. All he means is to prove that at the moment is that the Harding administration is getting ready to turn its back on the Versailles treaty and the covenant and is planning to end the technical state of war by a congressional resolution which would be followed by carefully worked out policy toward the other nations of the world.

The new policy will not be isolation. It will not be a return to the old days of diplomatic seclusion. It will mean a policy of bold and powerful America which will not cease to be aggressive where her rights are concerned and that America recognizes the importance of playing her part in preserving world peace if any nation or government threatens to disturb civilization again.

Principles, Not Formulas. Mr. Harding is loath to talk formulas. Principles of action are already imbedded in the minds of the president and the secretary of state. The endeavor will be to play an independent role in world politics using the moral influence of America to adjust those matters which the United States considers her interest and withholding American participation from anything that involves us in quarrels or controversies in which we have no vital concern. The Wilson policy was based on an altruistic conception of America's mission in the world. The Harding policy is based upon a consideration of the practicalities of a situation in which the changing factors make it a sounder alternative to achieve complete freedom of action for the time being at least.

"Open Door" Cardinal Factor.

There is one principle first enunciated by John Hay which is to be a cardinal factor in the Harding program. Originally it was applied to the Far East, but it is intended to be extended around the world and to be the basis for America's claim that she be given equality of commercial opportunity, whether or not the treaty of Versailles bestows special privileges on straitorian nations. In other words, the United States will derive her rights to equality of trade by reason of her part in winning the war. She will claim rights that accrued to her out of the signing of the armistice and not necessarily out of any undefined and temporary arrangement to effect most of the terms of that armistice.

Mandate Situation Is Example.

The mandate situation is a case in point. The allies have been managing things to suit themselves in certain regions originally owned by Germany. The reparation question, too, is one in which America has a vital interest. All these things were covered in the Versailles treaty. Having turned the back on the document, the American policy hereafter will be to conserve as many rights as were given other nations under that pact. The United States holds as a valued asset the foreignness which she made during the war. She does not mean to be eliminated from consideration of every question that directly or indirectly affects the return to the American people of the 16 billion dollars that was loaned. The Washington government intends to have its say in all questions involving trade with Germany or Russia as the case may be and will express her viewpoint whenever it becomes necessary to do so. Already the American government has advised Germany that this government feels Germany is responsible for the war and must pay for the damage done. This is the first of a series of statements which will take the place of any signature on the Versailles treaty and will leave the department of state without pledges of concrete action.

Still Hope for Association. The hope for an association of nations has not been dimmed. There is no desire here to ask Europe to abandon the present league if that participation association suits the needs of the rest of the world.

There is no reason, either, why a new organization in the world shall not have the partnership of as many members of the present League of Nations as seek to join it. For the moment the Harding administration is insisting on American rights and claims throughout the globe. The Knox resolution in amended form will declare a technical state of non-aggression with Germany. Thereafter there will be a separate treaty with Germany, unless some genius in international law provides a formula whereby the good parts of the treaty of Versailles approved by Mr. Harding can be interwoven in a new treaty satisfactory to America and her allies. Mr. Harding foresees no chance of using the treaty without causing considerable embarrassment abroad in tearing it apart. But he has given no body of evidence that there is no special hurry about the new association of nations or the new treaty or even, the Knox resolution. The Harding administration wants to feel its way slowly.

WALWORTH COUNTY ELECTION QUIET

Tuesday's election in Walworth county was unusually quiet and a small vote was cast in all precincts. Returns indicate that Carey and Callahan, for state superintendent of schools, ran close. In Geneva town Charles Wurtz was defeated for chairman by Oscar Johnson by a vote of 122 to 88, and O. J. Krouse was elected chairman of the town of Troy by defeating Frank Macht.

Woodmen Elect Delegates. The Modern Woodmen held a county meeting in Elkhorn Wednesday, and elected the following delegates to the state meeting to be held in Oconto, May 10: Bert Welscher, Delavan; Amos Eagle, Whitewater; G. Miller, Genoa Junction; and John Gavin, Lake Geneva.

Clay had come to Annie Millikan now because of what she had told him about "Slim" Jim. This man was one of Durand's stand-bys. If there was any underground work to be done it was an odds-on chance that he would be in charge of it.

"I wish you'd stand by a poor girl that's in trouble," he said in answer to her question.

"You've certainly got a nerve with you. I'll say you have. You want me to throw the hooks into Jim for a girl I never set eyes on. I wish I had your crust."

"You wouldn't let Durand spell her life if you could stop it."

"Wouldn't I? Hump! Soft-soap stuff. Well, what's my cue? Where do I come in on this rescue-the-beautiful heroine act?"

"When did you see 'Slim' Jim last?"

"I might 'n' seen him this afternoon as I might not," she said cautiously, looking at him from under a broad hat brim.

"When?"

"I didn't see him after I got here that 'How Many' sign. If I seen him must 'n' been before two."

"Did he give you any hint of what was in the air?"

"Say, what's the layout? Are you drummin' Jim for the river?"

"Because she's your girl. Where do I come in at? What's there in it for me to go rappin' my friend?" demanded Annie sharply.

"She's not my girl," explained Clay. Then, with that sure instinct sometimes guided him, he added:

"The young lady I— I'm in love with has just become engaged to another man."

Miss Millikan looked at him, frankly incredulous.

"For the love of— Where's her eyes? Don't she know a real man when she sees one?"

"I'm standin' by 'Slim' because she's shy of friends. Any man would do that, wouldn't he? I came to you for help because—oh, because I know you're white-ecler'd honest."

A flushed girl burst into Annie's school. She was as sure as a tangent.

"Wouldn't it give a fellow a jolt?"

"They guy Jim Collins slips it to me confidential that he's off the crooked stuff. Nothin' doin' n-till goin' on the spud and porcchablin' don't look good to him no more. A four-room flat, a little wife, an' the straight road for 'Slim' Jim. I'd give it for though I'd give him to men. And he'd give up tonight for the chauffeur's ball."

"But you didn't go?"

"No, I sidesteps it this aft with a fairy tale about drivin' rich old dame out to Yonkers. All the time

Backache

St. Paul, Minn.—I was troubled with disordered kidneys for about two years.

My back ached terribly, side pained and I had frequent excretions. I let it run on until I read of Dr. Pierce's

Anuric (anti-uric-acid).

I took the Anuric but a short time when I was feeling fine. My side and back stopped paining, and kidneys acted normally. I could sleep well at night which I couldn't do before.

I certainly advise any one suffering from kidney disorders to use the Anuric Tablets.—Mrs. Louise GRULLAN, No.

CHAPTER XXI
At the Head of the Stairs

The cub whirled round the corner and sped down a side street that stretched far into the distance, so that he could see silent and deserted in the storm.

The rain, falling faster now, beat gustily in a silent against the left window of the cab. It was pouring in rivulets along the gutter beside the curb. Some sixth sense—one that comes to many men who live in the outdoors on the untamed frontier—warned Clay that something was not well.

"I'm here to tell the bull of what was once at Jezee when he had taken a place at a table to play poker with a bad man who had a grudge at him. Again it had sounded when he was about to sit down on a rock close to a crevice where a rattler lay coiled.

The machine had swing to the right and was facing from the wind instead of into it. Clay was not very well acquainted with New York, but he did know this was the direction of the "excavations."

He had with his knuckles on the frame of the cub to attract the attention of the driver. In the swishing rain, and close to the throng of the crowd, the chauffeur either did not or would not hear.

Urgency opened the door and swung out on the rumpling board. "We're goin' wrong. Stop the car!" he ordered.

The man at the wheel did not turn. He sped up.

His face wasted no time in the monstrosities. A moment and the chauffeur threw on the brake sharply. His reason was good out. The blue of a revolver was jammed hard against his ribs.

He had looked round once to find out what was prodding him. That was enough to convince him he had better stop.

Under the brake the back wheels skidded and brought up against the curb. Clay, hanging on by one hand, was flung hard to the sidewalk. The cub, doctoring, regained its equilibrium, gathered impetus with a snort, and leaped forward again.

As the chauffeur clambered to his feet he caught one full view of the chauffeur's triumphant, vindictive face. He had seen it before, at a reception especially arranged for him by Jerry Durand one memorable night. It belonged to the more talkative of the two gunmen he had surprised at the pretended poker game.

"Madam," he said impressively.

self. Her frock was home-made, daintily though with its fresh white batiste suit with blue tucks but simple to the point of plainness. Her slippers were canvas—but satisfaction to her feminine soul, she too was wearing silk stockings, Mrs. Weed's graduation gift.

"Did Tim Turner call you up?"

Myra asked after a silence—during which she had sat idly staring at her own gray eyes in the glass.

"Yes, yesterday." Ruth answered, adjusting a sash. "He asked me to go with him to the dance tonight, but I expected he would call off, so I did not wonder he was so long about it."

Myra said nothing. Her cheeks flushed a little and they were already pink from excitement. She said nothing.

But she remembered back when she had telephoned Tim at his office.

She had asked, casually, whether he was going with anyone special to the evening's entertainment. Tim had said "No." Myra with a genuine smile for a girl of her age had waited a moment making no sound. Presently his voice came back in the obvious answer: "My, I take you?"

Obviously yes, but not so much so as to reward one lad of 18.

The sky coquettish of even this age might have scorned such a clumsy method—but Myra and Tim belonged to a town where life was simpler and anything but subtle.

At any rate, Myra's acceptance of the invitation had all the pleased surprise that was necessary to carry off the situation.

"Why, Tim, I'd love to! How nice of you to ask me."

Then the talk had come with Ruth and she found out that Ruth expected to go with Tim. She knew Tim was very much interested in this boy, though with a curious reserve the girl had said very little about him to her.

She knew Ruth would never call and practically force Tim to ask her and she knew that when some convenient opportunity offered, Tim would ask Ruth to go with him. In fact, she had telephoned before this convenient opportunity presented itself.

"Who are you going with?" Ruth asked. And when Myra said "No one," she answered at once:

"Then, you, then you must go with Tim and me."

And Myra felt a little shame at her own recent selfishness.
